As we move past Turkey Day and look out across the horizon at the not-so-distant spring semester, I feel the need to give some advice on class selection. Between waking up extra early to get a specific class and planning out major, minor, and/or Core requirements, picking your schedule can be intimidating, but there are a few things beyond multiple alarm clocks that can make the process easier. For starters, use Course Schedule Planner (linked here, the site says Newark but links to New Brunswick’s). This program allows students to plan out multiple prospective schedules and, once classes open, register for multiple classes with just one click. Secondly, email your advisors (Honors or otherwise) if you have any doubts about scheduling/requirements. And finally, if you don’t get a course, use a third-party program like Schedru to monitor when your preferred section(s) opens. Stay strong out there, this is the final sprint of the semester so be sure to give it your best!

While on this productivity spree, why not check out some of our opportunities/events? Learn about the multitude of fellowship opportunities Rutgers offers by stopping by the upcoming event Happening @ 35: Art Casciato, Office of Distinguished Fellowships. Get your own shoutout in this newsletter by applying to be featured in a Senior Spotlight. Speaking of class registration, first-years looking to hone their leadership skills should consider applying for the First Year Fellowship Emerging Leaders Program.

Happening @35: Art Casciato
Join Dr. Art Casciato from the Office of Distinguished Fellowships as he discusses existing scholarship opportunities relevant to attending students. Dr. Casciato has been with Rutgers for some time and knows fellowship opps exceptionally well. Not only could this event save you some money, but it could give you a chance to explore some great opportunities. This event takes place on Fri, Dec 3 at 1:30 pm ET. Do yourself a huge favor and join the Zoom here.

Senior Spotlight Application
Share your SASHP and Rutgers experience by applying for a Senior Spotlight feature. In addition to tons of bragging rights and a spot in this very newsletter, Senior Spotlights are also featured on the honors blog, potentially featured on the SASHP YouTube channel, AND will be considered as a speaker for the SASHP Virtual Senior Brunch in the spring. Show what you've learned, how you've grown, and how you have connected with the honors community by filling out the newly revised application here.

First Year Fellowship Emerging Leaders Program
The application for the First Year Fellowship Emerging Leaders Program is now open! The program is currently seeking 90-100 first-year and transfer students looking to learn leadership skills for their college experience and careers. Fellows will have the opportunity to participate in an 8-week, 1.5-credit leadership course in the spring semester. Interested students can apply here by Fri, Dec 10. Take advantage of the time and see if this will fit into your spring 2022 schedule!
