

The Landmarks

RUTGERS SASHP NEWSLETTER

Wednesday, April 20, 2022

Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

So, with Earth Day coming up in two days I wanted to talk about one more thing about this planet's beauty that always amazes me: the landmarks. While landmarks can be anything from the national parks to local green areas, as an avid hiker I have always considered the more obscure landmarks that someone might encounter on the trail the most interesting. Random cabin in the woods that invites you in to sit by a fireplace, an abandoned rail cart station that makes the perfect place to stop for lunch, a big boulder on the side of the path that might be good for climbing, little houses made out of sticks decorated with various fabrics and props: all things that may or may not exist on the trail. Something about it feels almost mystical, and it is these encounters that ultimately keep you coming back.

Land-mark your calendars with some of these upcoming events/opportunities. Want to be part of the TEDxRutgers team? Check out their open volunteer positions. SASHP seniors looking to do some networking should stop by the upcoming Honors Alumni Gathering. Looking to join the very media team that puts out this newsletter? Applications are open for the paid Social Media Coordinator and Head Blog Editor positions.

Warm Regards,

Honors Alumni Gathering

The SASHP is hosting an Honors Alumni Gathering on Rutgers Day (April 30). This event, taking place from 3:30 PM - 4:30 PM in Deiner Park (behind the river dorms on College Ave), will give seniors the opportunity to chat with the honors alumni community (and provide a gift + light refreshments). Interested students can register here by Sun, Apr 24, or simply show up the day of. Students interested in volunteering at the event can contact Dean Kim-Lee at jmkim@sas.rutgers.edu.

Job Applications: Social Media Coordinator; Head Blog Editor

Want to join our media team? The SASHP is now accepting applications for two paid positions: Social Media Coordinator and Head Blog Editor. Starting in fall of 2022, the Social Media Coordinator will be in charge of SASHP's social media presence and crafting visual content for all of our channels (Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter). Also starting in the fall, the Head Blog Editor will be responsible for leading a team of staff writers who create content for the SASHP blog. This will involve copyediting published blog posts, coordinating with the team, and maintaining a constant flow of content for the blog. Both applications are due next Mon, Apr 25. Apply for the Social Media Coordinator position here and the Head Blog Editor position here.
