

Bagel Bungle

Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

If you know me, you know I'm pretty much useless without caffeine. My brain requires about 16 ounces of cold brew to get its cogs turning. As you might imagine, this makes ordering my morning coffee/breakfast an interesting affair, which is why I typically opt to DIY it in my apartment before heading off to class. However, the other day, I decided to grab my daily dose of caffeine from Hidden Grounds just to switch things up. I assumed that their kiosk-based system would be easy for my brain to comprehend that early in the morning (10:30 AM). Oh, how I overestimated the abilities of my under-caffeinated mind. Just as I was about to add my bagel to my virtual cart, I noticed an option to upgrade to "Sourdough." Intrigued by the idea of a sourdough bagel (really, what is that?) I tapped the upgrade option without further question. However, when I finally sat down to eat, I opened the box to find, not a bagel, but two large pieces of sourdough bread smeared with scallion cream cheese. Shocked, confused, and a bit betrayed, I sat and stared at the strange sandwich for a good three minutes, marveling at my misplaced pre-coffee ordering confidence. I also did eventually eat it and, you know what? It was actually pretty tasty. Mission failed successfully, I guess.
