Who You Calling Cute?

Wednesday, April 18, 2018

Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

Sugar, spice, and everything nice. These were the ingredients used to create the perfect SAS students, but Dean Jones accidentally added an extra ingredient to the concoction - Chemical X. Thus, the Honors Program Students were born. Having their ultra-super powers made brainier, busier, and brilliant-er, these students dedicate their lives to learning about their world and using their knowledge to fight the forces of evil. Hone your greatest superpower this week - your voice - with all of these amazing opportunities and events so that the next time the Mayor of Townsville calls the Powerpuff Hotline you're ready for the attack.

Come to the defense of women everywhere by marching in Take Back the Night. Listen to the voices of strong women with different experiences at the play Dreams Deferred: Monologues from College Dropouts. Take some time off from defending Townsville to see The Vagina Monologues, a radical play about love and self-acceptance. Drag the professor out of his dank laboratory and bring him to see some quality music at the Queen's Chorale Spring Concert. Point Mojo Jojo in the direction of the Spring Creativity Showcase if he wants his voice to be heard without having to destroy the town. Chase your dreams by applying to be an ApotheCom Junior Editor or the Women's College Coalition Research Intern. Read about heroes who helped in the real world in Fairooz's post on the progress in Flint, Michigan on the SASHP Blog.

No matter what you do this week - whether it's defeating Mojo Jojo, stopping a takeover by cats, or chomping away your greatest arch nemesis (broccoli) - remember we here at the Honors Program are here to help you do just that.

Duh,
Blossom and Bubbles
Student Directors of Honors Media
Take Back the Night

Speak out against sexual and gendered violence! Join Women Organizing Against Harassment for a march to shatter the silence surrounding sexual and gender-based violence. The rally begins tonight April 18 at 7PM at College Hall. They will start by making signs and begin the march at 8 PM. RSVP here.

The Vagina Monologues

Join a radical movement of self-love and acceptance! The Vagina Monologues are a collection of stories, interviews and real-life experiences from women of all ages and walks of life from across the globe. Often controversial but always powerful, this show is done in honor of the millions of women affected by violence every year. The show will run April 19 & 20 at 8PM in the Livingston Student Center. Buy tickets at getinvolved.tix.com.
Dreams Deferred: Monologues from College Dropouts

Walk in the shoes of some else for an evening. Honor Your Mamas and Rutgers Students with Children as they present a play detailing what it’s like to be a young single mother in America. Through prose and poetry, they invite you to follow the powerful and raw accounts of the barriers and exclusion that young mothers face in every facet of society, including during their pursuit of higher education. The play will be April 24 at 8PM in the Busch Student Center. Purchase tickets here.

Spring Creativity Showcase

Celebrate the creativity of SAS students! Come listen to students present their own prose, poetry, and digital media pieces on April 19 at 6:10 PM in Murray Hall room 302.

Queen’s Chorale Spring Concert

Find joy in your mistakes at the Queen’s Chorale Spring Concert. With a set list on topics ranging from environmental destruction to breakups to going to Rutgers, there’s an array of music addressing a variety of questionable choices. So let the choir raise your misery to the highest note this Saturday, April 22 from 4-6PM in the Kirkpatrick Chapel.
Women's College Coalition: Research Internship

Be a research intern for the Women’s College Coalition! This position will contribute to research, writing and developing reports for internal communication with WCC members. The position is a paid internship for 300 hours over eight 8 weeks from June-August 2018. The stipend is $3,000. Ideal candidate will be an upper-class undergraduate who can work remotely with the ability to spend at least one week during the summer in the Women’s College Coalition office in Atlanta, GA.

General responsibilities:
--Become familiar with existing WCC research reports as background reference.
--Assist in development of research data points to support WCC mission and goals.
--Assist in writing and editing various reports.
--Develop fact sheets, infographics and other visualization of research data.
--Gather information and create a database of potential funding sources for WCC.

Requirements
--A self-starter who can work independently and collaboratively with the WCC team.
--Detail-oriented with strong writing and verbal communication skills.
--Digital literacy with online spaces and research portals.
--Proficient in Microsoft Office Suite; Self-starter, team player and ability to manage multiple assignments with deadlines of varying length.

Send your resume and a cover letter to michele.ozumba@womenscolleges.org by May 11.

Apothecom Junior Editor

ApotheCom, a global medical communications agency, is seeking a junior editor for their office in Philadelphia (Yardley), Pennsylvania. This would be a medical editing position; the ability to understand science well enough is required, but the need to be able to edit this type of material effectively is an even bigger component. Contact Senior Editor Colin Gittens at cbgit2002@yahoo.com to learn more and communicate your interest.