The Song Stuck in My Head

Wednesday, October 10, 2018

Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

We’ve all had a song stuck in our head. Usually it’s a catchy commercial jingle, but sometimes it’s not. Maybe the lyrics are as poetic as Shakespeare, or maybe the tune is the right degree of melancholic. I have this theory that songs get stuck in our head because we find them at just the right moment in life. This could be a moment when we need to dance, cry, or sing along. It seems like books, hobbies, and even people find their way into our lives exactly when we need them. We just have to be open.

Hone your writing skills at the Artists Collective Writing Workshop. Have a say in selecting the next book for the SASHP: come to the Summer Reading Committee Kickoff Meeting. Show off your school spirit by designing a Game-Day T-Shirt. Attend a lecture by a renowned journalist titled Radicalism on College Campuses. Make sure you know when your Class Academic Meeting will take place. Grab a hold of your future by attending the career planning workshop with Nancy Mark. Catch a free screening of Mulan: Legendary Warrior by the NJ Film Festival. Explore a world-renowned museum on the Met Honors Bus Trip. Read a list of hand-picked TedTalks in this week’s Honors Blog Post. Enter your best photos in the Rutgers Global Photo Contest. Show off your eye for design by entering our Logo Design Contest.

The next time you’re sitting on a bus, maybe you should play the song that’s an old favorite of yours. Here at SASHP, we provide these moments of connection for when you need them the most.

With warmest regards,

Julianna Rossano
Student Director of Honors Media
