Dear SAS Honors Program Students,

Welcome to your first full week of classes! This week is sure to feel entirely different than last. We'll all be launching into class discussions, completing serious homework assignments, and setting the tone for the rest of the term. I can already tell that my classes are an equal mix of wonderful and nerve-racking, but I put myself in the right mindset by treating this semester like a new adventure. New classes mean a chance to make new friends, set up new routines, find new professors to inspire me, and to do work I'm proud of.

Check out these events around campus to breathe life into your week. Taste new food and find out how you can travel during Study Abroad Week. Learn about summer opportunities by attending the Rutgers Foundation Summer Internship Info Session. Reconnect with your SASHP mentor or mentee just in time for Peer Mentor Week. Give back to the Rutgers community by donating to the SASHP Food Drive. Buy tickets for a night of magic at the SASHP Winter Formal. If you're interested, click here to watch a trailer the formal. Put your research out there and apply to the MICHHERS Summer Program. Take on a new role by applying to be a Peer Leader in Residence. Housing selection is coming up - make sure you know your honors options. Lastly, apply for a leadership position in a prestigious interdisciplinary organization known as PPE.

From all of us here at the SASHP, enjoy the semester!

With warmest regards,
Julianna Rossano
